Course Overview

In this course, we will engage theories explaining the shift of authority from the national to the supranational level. We will examine general theories, paying special attention to the European integration process, which is the most advanced and most theorized case of multi-level governance. In the first part of the course, we cover theories from the work of Ernst Haas to the present, which ask questions such as: How have political scientists conceptualized European integration? How have they explained the development of supranational institutions? As we will see, there are few areas of agreement, so we will compare the strengths and weaknesses of these various theories.

In the second part of the course, we will address more specific questions regarding power and interests in the European Union. For instance, how is conflict over European issues structured? How does European integration affect domestic contestation between political parties? During this section, we will also consider redistribution, regulation and policies at the supranational level, including European monetary policy and the Common Foreign & Security Policy. Finally, we will evaluate the generalizability of the lessons from Europe for other regional economic regimes.

Course Expectations and Requirements

Response Papers

Each student will complete three written critiques of the readings, 1500-2000 words each. Each paper should be distributed to all class members via email by 4pm the Sunday before class. These response papers will be the starting point for our discussion each week. The authors will also be expected to help lead the discussion during their week. Each student will choose one session from each of the following groups: 2-4, 5-7, and 8-10. To ensure even coverage, we will coordinate response papers during the first session.

I expect the papers to be analytical response papers, not simply restatements of the main arguments for a particular week. Rather than summaries, you should focus on the strengths and weaknesses of the readings, including addressing any debates between the readings as well as discussing any interesting unanswered research questions raised by the authors. Do not feel obliged to address each article from the week. Rather, you may want to focus on one issue or debate and follow it through several pieces. The supplementary readings provide additional resources for this purpose and you are welcome to introduce them to the course. For these readings, though, be aware your classmates will not have read them so a little more summarizing may be in order.

Evaluation

Response Papers (3)	75%
Participation	25%

Readings

All books will be available for purchase from the Seminary Co-op Bookstore, and will be placed on reserve at the Regenstein Library. Readings will be available on-line, either in JSTOR or directly through the library subscriptions, and will be linked in Chalk (under the Library Course Reserves tab).
